INDUCEMENT OFFERED.
Arrival of mail with prices of WOOL UP, market statistics, abundant harvest at home, MONEY MARKET.
The local advantages are—finesness of wool, large capacity MANY TERMS OF PAYMENT, and all splendidly improved and watered.

THREE of the most choice, sound, and healthy blocks of country in Queensland, all old New South Wales leases, and fully improved, together with choice Woolless leasings On the same runs, and also a fine selection of stock, so that they cannot possibly be surpassed by any in all the colonies. Two squatters have realised fortunes.
WILLIAM TINDALE, Auctioneer, offers 16,000 SHEEP.

THE SECOND STATION consists of
Two large blocks of country in Queensland, intersected by magnificent creeks, one of which irrigates the banks of the other, and is well watered. The runs are chiefly milkers, and 12 HORSES—all sound and never diseased—will be sold with these runs. The wool of the runs is of the highest quality, and it is always eagerly sought after at home, and purchased at the highest market prices. The improvements are very ample.

THE THIRD PASTORAL PROPERTY consists of
A large tract of country in the State of Victoria, on the north-west river of 10 miles runs through its centre. This is equivalent of very large capacity; it could be, as it has been, used for many years for sheep. The improvements are complete. With the last named run, the improvements are complete. With the last named run, the improvements are complete. With the last named run, the improvements are complete.

SHEEP, 160 CATTLE, 12 head of horses. The wool, of England and in the colonies, is as celebrated for its quality and value as the high prices already realized as that of the last station.

THE FOURTH INVESTMENT consists of THREE FINE WELL-SELECTED BLOCKS also in Queensland, and all of them are in the hands of squatters who were very recently sold 15,000 mixed store sheep, at 13s. 6d. cash. The country here is of a more extensive nature than the others, and is better watered. It will be sold with 13,000 SHEEP and 12 HORSES, and the improvements are abundantly watered by a flowing river, which intersects the property for a distance of about 10 miles; and there is a fine creek running along the whole extent of the runs, 20 miles. The improvements are very good.

THE FIFTH STATION is
A NOTED CATTLE AND SHEEP PROPERTY in New South Wales, and is one of the great cattle and sheep runs having been obtained from this property. In a short time one owner amassed a fine independence, and the improvements are such that it is wanted to meet the wonderful demand existing for the SUPERIOR QUALITY OF CATTLE TO NEW ZEALAND, where bullocks are fetching £28 per head, and working bullocks are bringing £120 to £250 per head. It is one of the greatest opportunities of the present era for purchasing so desirable a run. It is of very large capacity. It is to be sold with 4500 CATTLE and 12 HORSES, and 4000 SHEEPS. The brand of the herd are famous, and are known in all parts of the South Wales. The blood of the noted Ravensworth stock, and that of G. Loder, Esq., as well as that of other eminent breeders, are being raised. The improvements are very extensive and in good order. The water is little or none at all.

N.B.—All Horse stock, stores, drays, gear, harnesses, implements, &c., will be sold, at a valuation in connection with any of these properties.

FOR SALE, the well-known Station of STOKES HENGES, in New England, with about 5000 cattle and 1200 horses, and 1000 acres of land.
The Station of TOOLOOMBE Broadwood, Queensland, with about 4000 well-bred quiet cattle, and capable of carrying a very large herd. This run adjoins the celebrated station of the late Mr. Sturt, and commands the supply of the Peak Downs country.

Not sold privately before the end of the year, these properties will be submitted to public competition in February next.
GILCHRIST, WATT, and CO.

FOR PRIVATE SALE.—Clarence River.—THE BRIMMING RUN, with about 2800 Head of Cattle.
The undersigned has received instructions to offer for private SALE the above Run, in the Clarence River District, containing about 14 miles from South Graham, on the Orara River, and 10 miles from the mouth of the Orara, and adjoining the well-known Ramoth Run of G. G. Tindal, Esq., and the Nyumbula Run of G. Shannon, Esq., and is one of the best runs in the district. The improvements are very good, which is a rare thing in the district. The country is of a first-class fattening character, in proof of which the cattle are always in demand by the butchers.

The herd is very superior and quiet, the greatest attention having been paid to it for the last seven years, both in the breeding of cows and bulls, the latter being always of the purest blood.

The improvements comprise a superior four-roomed verandah cottage, stable; garden with paling fence; paddocks, dairy, store, servants' room, and five four-roomed cottages, and a large stockman's hut, all shingled; stockyard capable of holding the herd, with heading yards on the Orara and Nyumbula rivers; a large brick paddock, cultivated paddock, and calf paddock.

This is a most desirable opportunity for any one wishing to obtain a comfortable homestead in a very superior district.

In proximity to Graham and Ureahra with a largely increasing population on the banks of the Lower Clutha, every good business might be carried on.

THE SYDNEY MORNING HERALD, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1863.

and which was conceded by the most eminent writers to be a tax to be had recourse to upon the most extraordinary emergency.

Upon the motion of Mr. CORNWALL, and after a long discussion, the Chairman was ordered to report progress, and he obtained leave to sit again on Tuesday next.

The House adjourned at twenty minutes past one.

THE COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS is, no doubt, right in obeying a Treasury order, as an official of the Government. In the subordination of departments the lower must take its cue from the higher, and trust to the general maxim which relieves a servant from responsibility for acts done by command, and not being criminal in themselves. And this would be a summary mode to establish a tyranny, if the subject had no redress, and could be damned by the Ministry at pleasure. Parliamentary responsibility is a mere illusion, and it is impossible to do more than turn out those who have to direct the acts of their officers without legal warrant.

The Collector must, therefore, be legally liable, and he must look for protection to the House of Commons on the faith of which he acts.

The practice of the English Government is to enforce the resolutions of the House of Commons in reference to the increase or abatement of duties. If the increase be not afterwards sanctioned by the Parliament by bill, the money is returned; if the abatement should not be made law, the importers are bound to pay the difference. Thus the Commons vote is necessary to authorise the Minister to order the Collector of Customs to refuse to pass entries.

Questions were put to Ministers, of which the following is the substance of the replies given:—That Mr. Martin had selected mineral land at Moruya under the Crown Lands Regulation Act, in September, 1862, and that he was the only member of the present Government, other than Mr. Holroyd, who had made any such selection; that Mr. Mann, Government surveyor, had been instructed on the 21st October last to survey and mark the Box Tree Flat and Upper Paper Roads; no instructions had been given to Mr. Oliver, his intended resignation having been announced; that the Government were awaiting the report of the select committee now sitting on the subject, before taking any step to amend the law relating to lunatic asylums and that to the same committee would be referred the bill to amend the law relating to the Lunatic Asylums, and that the bill to amend the Lunatic Asylums Act, 1845, was now before the House.

Mr. ROBERTSON moved the adjournment of the House for the purpose of impugning the statement of the Secretary for the Colonies, in reference to the existence of pleuro-pneumonia in the Northern districts of the colony. The statement was calculated seriously to depreciate the price of horned stock, and materially to injure the export trade in stock.

The House having gone into committee on the statement, Mr. ROBERTSON moved the adjournment of the House for the purpose of impugning the statement of the Secretary for the Colonies, in reference to the existence of pleuro-pneumonia in the Northern districts of the colony.

THE SYDNEY MORNING HERALD, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1863.

strict limits of the law, and that in all doubtful cases the Courts should incline their weight in favour of the subject.

A report has been spread that the Government have resolved to enforce the ad valorem duties under some statute repealed. We do not think it can be in any respect founded. Were it possible it would be violent and indefensible. But the Act 19 of Vic. No. 14, sec. 2, under which our duties are now collected, says that "in lieu and instead of the duties of Customs heretofore levied upon goods, wares, and merchandise imported into the colony of New South Wales, there shall be payable the several duties of Customs mentioned in the schedule, and no others." This excludes the possibility of reviving these obsolete duties, except authorised by law.

We should certainly deprecate any vexatious proceedings on either part; but it is really too bad that the time so precious to the country should be wasted in idle chatter, when a question awaits decision on which is suspended the commercial destiny of New South Wales.

On Thursday night, Mr. ROBERTSON undertook to prove there was no deficit, as the nominal and apparent deficit was far more than covered by good promises to pay, which were sure to be redeemed. Mr. ROBERTSON explained that it was not the business of a statesman to be an accept at figures, and this is perhaps the reason why he has always been out in his own estimates, and still seems unable to understand the difference between selling at the market price and forcing sales at a depreciation. His intellect is too much of the comprehensive order to enable him to understand these trifling minutiae.

The deficit at the end of the present year, as stated by Mr. EAGAN, is £534,538 8s. 6d. In undertaking to dissipate this deficit, Mr. ROBERTSON begins by dropping the odd £134,538 8s. 6d. and calls the deficit £400,000. This, of course, is excusable in a statesman who cannot be expected to stoop to figures; and if this kind of statement could actually get rid of deficits as easily as it can get rid of them, the management of finance would indeed be easy. Mr. ROBERTSON then calls to mind that there was a deficit of £150,000 when Mr. DRAS THOMSON left office, so he deducts that amount from the present deficit, and argues that responsible government is only chargeable at most with £250,000. This would be all fair enough if the original deficit had survived and continued to increase. But if Mr. ROBERTSON's great intellect cannot condescend to figures, it may be capable of embracing facts. Now, it happens to be a fact that the original deficit was worked off. Mr. DONALDSON reduced it considerably while he had the management of the finances, and it subsequently disappeared altogether; for which the Government took to itself great credit. The Act authorising a loan to pay off this deficit was never acted upon, and was repealed as unnecessary. The Government, after taking credit for having extinguished this original deficit, cannot bring it to life again in order to reduce the odium due to recent mismanagement. The present deficit has nothing to do with the old deficit. It is a new creation, and is the result of the last two years, and the responsibility of it, therefore, rests exclusively on the heads of those who have had the management of affairs during that period.

The residue of £250,000 which Mr. ROBERTSON confesses to, he contends is far more than covered by the balances due from the selectors, amounting now to £417,000, which he considers perfectly good. He is for issuing debentures, therefore, on this security, to be paid off when the money comes in. But then the money may never come in, because the selectors are under no obligation to pay up so long as they pay the light interest of five per cent. If deferred payments had been limited to a certain term—if the credit had stopped at the expiration of three, or five, or seven, or ten years, there would have been more reason for counting on payments coming in at the times fixed. But at present it is impossible to count on anything. The Land Act has been framed on the supposition that the free selector may never be in a position to pay up, and therefore it has exempted him from the payment of interest. The security offered, therefore, is of the very worst kind on which to raise a terminable loan. For not only is there the constantly overhanging risk of repudiation, but there is no means of compelling the debtors to clear off their obligations. It is obvious that we cannot base any financial scheme on a confidence in this resource. We must make provision independently of it. If the payments come in, the money must be looked upon in the light of a windfall; but it will not do to count upon it. When we get the money we may spend it, but it has been a great mistake to spend it by anticipation.

Mr. ROBERTSON endeavoured, though vainly, to exculpate his land law from being partly the cause of the deficient revenue, and he reproduced to that end the figures which he presented on a previous occasion, and which we have already shown to be worthless for that purpose. The fact cannot be gainsaid. The records of past years show that the average price of rural lands sold at auction is 25s. an acre. This includes good and bad taken together. A selection of all choice lots would produce a large quantity of prime bits at a nominal price less by 3s. an acre than the market price; and of his selling price he has received in cash only one-quarter, giving him a credit for the rest at a rate of interest considerably below the market value of money. He has received, therefore, even taking into account the promises to pay, far less than buyers have proved themselves willing to give. If to sell public property for less than its value, and to do this on a large scale, is not to destroy revenue, then there is no meaning in language. By forcing large sales of city and town lands, and by rapidly gathering up all purchases on pre-emptive and improvement claims, a large temporary gross revenue is shown; but this can only deceive those who are unacquainted with the way in which the oracle is worked.

Mr. ROBERTSON himself, in spite of his attempted defence, knows so well that it is hollow, that he rests for his ultimate vindication on the broader and safer ground that he has always held considerations of revenue secondary to those of settlement. Suppose we have sacrificed revenue to the cause of settlement, what have we gained in return? This would be an adequate defence if it could be shown that the sacrifice was at all necessary to promote bona fide settlement, otherwise the course pursued is a reflection upon the assumed statesmanship. Greater facilities for getting possession of land did not require deferred payments or reduction in price. A vigorous administration would have saved the revenue and satisfied the public. Moreover, the new law has been so largely availed of by rich persons to pick out the eyes of the country and secure a practical possession of extensive areas of land, that it has created as much monopoly as it has destroyed, and will be found in many instances to have proved a hindrance rather than a help to bona fide settlement.

Those who ridicule the idea of deriving a revenue from land should remember how large a part of our public expenditure arises incidentally from the fact that we are still colonising, still settling fresh families on the soil.

The land revenue, no doubt, is not a permanent source of revenue. It is incidental to the first epoch of colonisation, and will only last while there remains land still to sell. The time will come when this source of revenue will be shut off altogether. But meanwhile the stage of colonisation, if it has thus a special source of revenue, has also a corresponding source of expenditure.

We have already shown that the great increase in our annual outlay is due mainly to the Public Works Department, and these works are mainly to make the land which has been brought available for commercial use. At the moment that people settle on the land there is an outlay for roads, bridges, wharves, harbours, jetties, &c. It is on the land that this expenditure is made, and if the land is such a heavy cause of expenditure, it may be fairly looked to also as a source of revenue. Taken away from the estimates all the charges that are put down for public works for the accommodation of those who have taken up land, and the expenditure would fall easily within the limits of our present income. The expenses of general government could be easily met by the ordinary income. It is in connection with the land that the expenditure so much exceeds the revenue.
